THE BELLEVUE HOSPITAL FIRE.

CROWDS VIEWING THE RUINS OF THE PAVIL ION-THEORIES AS TO THE CAUSE OF THE DISASTER-THE STRUCTURE DENOUNCED AS A "TINDER BOX"-THE WARDEN PRAISES THE CONDUCT OF HIS SUBORDINATES.

Crowds of people thronged the four corners of First avenue and Twenty-sixth street all day yester day, looking over the high stone walls at what was revealed of the burned pavilion at Bellevue Hospital. Two stout policemen stood on the north and south corners of the east side of First avenue and prevented people from passing down toward the river. In the early morning the rule of not allowing any one to pass, no matter what the pretext, was rigidly enforced, but later in the day the stringency of the order was relaxed, and many persons passed down and were admitted through the gate at cilovue Hospital.

The destroyed building was entirely gutted by the fire, and its wooden sides stood charred and black-ened by the flames. Some parts of the inside were more badly burned than the others. At the junction of the two wards stood an old ice chest; down the centre of the room stood the cylinder stoves Ticking and old bedding were strewn about in the corners of the building. The structure which was destroyed on Saturday night stood as an eyesore to people visiting the neighborhood. Many wondered why it stood there at all. Old residents when they saw the flames licking their way over the stone wall into the middle of the street were delighted that an old rookery which they thought contained destroyed, and were struck with astonishment when they read yesterday morning that this building contained twenty-nine persons who were in various stages of illness. A person who lived in the neighborhood for sixteen years said to the Harath reporter:
"Well, I wouldn't have guessed that old barrack covered sick people. At any rate, it was dangerous and intensely inflammable, and no person with any sense would put sick people in there." WHY IT WAS ERECTED.

The building was erected eighteen years ago, and at that time almost caused a riot. It was intended for the reception of cases of typhus fever and other malignant diseases. The people of the east side were determined that it should not be occupied for the purpose intended, and fever cases were smuggled in there after dark white the excitement asted. It was afterward used for an erytipelas ward and for other painful diseases it served at the time of the Westfield disaster for th reception of the burned and scalded, and was used for that purpose for overthree months. It was then atted up by the Commissioners of Charities and Correction and used by the hospital people for the placing of females and children. The damaged building would cost probably $1,000 to replace, but since it was burned down a broker named Hosmer has come forward and promised to put up a com. modious brick pavilion if it was wanted

Several prominent members of the Fire Department called yesterday afternoon and inspected the destroyed building. "Well, what a tinder box to put human beings in. I don't see how any person got out of there alive," said an official. "Had it been later on in the night there would be a different story to tell. There would not be three lives lost, but the whole twenty-nine in the pavilion, together with the nurses." The fire officials collected about one o'clock and sought for the cause of the fire. The pavilion was gone over, and every nook was visited for solutions. arden O'Rourke went with them, and after con siderable deliberation it was suggested that the fire originated in a nurse's room which stood in the corner between wards Nos. 31 and 32. Lint. clothes oakum, medical stores and other articles needed in a medical ward were stored in this room. After considerable talk and not a few dark surmises it was said that these medical stores were caused to ignite by spontaneous combustion. No other solution being given, those interested were satisfied until the official investigation takes place.

THE BURNED CHILDREN.

The bodies of the three children who were burned at the fire in the pavilion lay in the Morgue yester day. They presented a hideous and ghastly sight to all who came to look at them. Deputy Coroner Mac Whinnie viewed them in the morning, and it is not expected that any exhaustive investigation will be held by Coroner Flanagan. This will be lett to the nission of Charities and Correction. It is not Expected that any person will claim the bodies. The names as taken from the hospital books are Thomas Sheehy, no home, aged ten years; Charles Bentley, one year, Seventy-third street and First avenue; Martin Richter, no home, aged six weeks. He was piaced in the hospital by Lena Richter, his mother, who is a patient in the hospital. Mary Dunn, thirty-two years old, of No. 45 New Bowery, was the woman who died from right in the gate Reeper's lodge, after being removed from the pavilion. She was said by Warden O'Rourke to have been afflicted by a complication of diseases. She had heart disease, pneumonia and a half dozen other complaints, any one of which he says would have taken a person off in a short time. He ascribed the leaving of the children in the ward No. 32 to oversight and the suddenness with which the flames burst through the building. The southwest wind, which then blew a hurricane against the corner of the building, drove the flames into both sections of the pavilion. So quickly did it spread that the nurse in charge of the pavilion had no time to apprise the authorities at the office of the hospital, but allowed them to learn it in their own good time.

Warder O'ROURKE INTERVIEWED.

Warder James F. O'Rourke was seared in his office in the second story of Bellevue Hospital yesterday atternoon. To this office a Herald reporter found his way to talk with the Warden about the fire.

"How is it, Warden, that such a panic seems to have seized on the attendants? It is stated that there is no system arranged in anticipation of such calamities," said the reporter. "There was even a rumor that some of the attendants were drunk."

"My people afforded efficient and capable assistance at the scene of the fire," said the Warden, "and I am proud to have such capable assistants."

"Do you remember witnessing any individual instance of bravery that would call forth the praise you have given?"

"Do you remember witnessing any individual instance of bravery that would call forth the praise you have given?"

"When the alarm was given first I was coming down from my room and I went to the scene of the fire. The people were being carried out by the orderlies and placed in the other wards of the hospital. The men did nobly. A number were collected at the hospital building when the fire was burning, and I asked them if everybody got out. "Everybody," they called out. But I wasn't satisfied with that. I went to this women's ward and knocked out the window glass, but could see no one in the beds. We did the same to the children's, but we could not see in there, owing to the flame and smoke. No; no one was to blame that they did not get out."

NO EXCITEMENT EXPECTED.

"Is there not any systematic arrangement or drill through which you can rely on your men in case of fire in the main building?"

"But there is no harm from fire here. Why, sir, we never have any unusual excitement in this building."

"But there is no harm from fire here. Why, sir, we never have any unusual excitement in this building."

"Do you remember, Warden, the case of a man who ran into Twenty-sixth street with a sharpened carving knife in his hand, over a year age, when no one stopped him? He ran from the erysipelas payilion, mear the Morgue office, to First avenue and Twenty-sixth street."

"That fellow ran from ward 25 in the main building and was an exceptional case. It was at dead of night. He picked up a kinfe lying on the table. To Miss Lassoniere, the nurse, I wish you would give credit for bravery," the Warden suggested. "She wasn't excited or hysterical at the fire."

"Where is she now?" the reporter queried.
"At the Nurses' Home, across the street."

"Miss Lassoniere. A smilling lady at the door said she was very tired and was abed. Wouldn't the reporter call at half-past six o'clock? Then Miss Lassoniere would be down to tea and he could see her. Protaptly at that hour the reporter called, but Miss Lassoniere was do lit to see him. But wouldn't a friend-another nurse—do just as well? She had lold this nurse all about it. Miss Lassoniere was enraged giving medicine to a patient, when she saw lames in the corner of the room. She had a convalencent patient and a Blackwein's Island "convict help" for assistants. She went to the convalescent patient and told her to take charge of the children, it the same time carrying out one in her arms. Then she assisted in carrying the women. She is a remarkably cool person, the substitute said, and does not get excited under ordinary circumstances. She is not troubled now with hysteris, but is very sick, caused by the excitement from the fire.

The Warden wrote out a report for the Commissioners which will be forwarded this morning, and then an investigation will take place before them.

Mr. Alvin Wallace (erroneously printed John), whose statement in counsetion with the breaking out of the fire appeared in the HERALD yesterday, desires to say that he did not criticise unfavorably the conduct of the Fire Department. He says, on the contrary, that he never saw the firemen more prompt or more zealous in their efforts to save life

BASEBALL.

It is whispered that New York is to have a first class professional club during the season of 1880, with Higham as manager and the following named players:—McCormack, pitcher; James White, catcher; McVey, first baseman; Ross Barnes, second baseman; Doscher, third baseman; Force, short stop; Remsen, left fielder; Farrow, centre fielder and change catcher; Higham, right fielder, and Matthews, change pitcher.

Notification has been sent to the clubs composing the League that the Bay City Club, of San Francisco, Cat., desire to join the League Alliance. This Pacific coast club secured engagements with three Eastern men for next season, viz.—Leary, Sweeny and Taylor. At their recent annual convention Mr. Hurlbert, of Chicago, who has been its president ever since the formation of the League, was re-elected for another year. Before adjourning the League voted to hold next year's annual meeting in this city, on the first Tuesday of December.

The championship for 1879 and a purse, containing three twenty-dollar gold pieces, were awarded to the Knickerbocker Club, of San Francisco, by the Pacific League of baseball players at their recent annual meeting. This is the only club of that region that defeated a club of the National League.

The Baltimoreans, headed by prominent business men, held a meeting recently and formally organized an excellent baseball association. The following men were chosen to fill, and accepted, the effices indicated, viz.—William H. Shryock, president; John T. Worthington, vice president; John W. Cathcart, treasurer; Charles A. Hadel and William T. Applegerth, secretaries, the first named recording and the other corresponding; N. L. Goldsborough, Charles G. Joyce, C. F. McCullough, Thomas J. Shryock and John S. Thomas, directors. The new organization at first intended joining the League, but when that body voted to continue fifty cents as the charge for admission its representatives obtained permission from the League to withdraw the application for membership. They will now unito with the National Association.

ST. JULIEN'S 2:12 3-4.

[From the Kentucky Record, Dec. 6.]

The wonderful performance of the bay geiding St.
Julien, by Volunteer, dam by Sayres' Harry Clay, at Oakland, Cal., in 2:12% makes him, if the track was a mile, the king of the trotting turf. Under the trotting rules "time made at fairs and on any track, whether short or not, shall constitute a bar, the same as if made over a track that was full measurement," but the question arises, Was the Oakland Park track a mile over which, and at the time, St. Park track a mile over which, and at the time, St. Julien the right to claim to be king of the trotting turf? An old turfman, who has spent several seasons in California, informs us that several years since Oakland Park track was not a mile, but lacked some thirty or forty feet of it, measured three feet from the inner rail. Of our own knowledge we know nothing of the length of this track. It may have been longthened since that time or it may not. If the track is torty feet short St. Julien's time would be about 2:13% instead of 2:12%. To put the question of St. Julien's performance beyond quibble it would be well that Oakland Park track should be measured three feet from the inner rail by a competent and reliable engineer. We know of no one on the Pacific slope more competent to see the track measured than our friend, Mr. Joseph Caira Simpson. He is a gentleman, strictly reliable and honorable, and a certificate bearing his name and a competent engineer's as to the length of the track would be acceptable to the public at large. If the track is a mile let St. Julien have all the credit due him for his great performance, but, if short (under the rules it will act as a barr), he should not be permitted to rob Rarus (2:13%) of his claim as King of the Trotting Turf. We have no interest to serve in the matter, either in owners or horses, near or remote, beyond getting at the facts of the case. Julien trotted? If not, has St. Julien the right to

The chain is the thing Wherein to catch the merit of the King.

[From the San Francisco Call, Nov. 30.] The two weeks of beautiful weather culminated in rain, and if St. Julien has oun ortunately contracted, the trot could not have taken place.

Many have been surprised that his owners thought of attempting to repeat the great performance unit the days had lengthened and there was a longer period of sunshine between norming and evening to the days had lengthened and there was a longer period of sunshine between norming and evening to the days had lengthened and there was a longer period of sunshine between norming and evening to declare that one strongth of sunshine between norming and evening of sunshine between norming and evening to the days had lengthened as the days had lengthene rain, and if St. Julien had been lucky enough to escape the cold which he had so unfortunately con-his performance on that occasion, much less to lower the figures then announced. The authenticity of the time record which St. Julien now enjoys is not to be reasonably questioned, but there are unbelievers in this country as well as others; hence much criticism upon the wonderful performance of this equine celebrity has ensued. Soon after the wires transmitted the news of this great feat to the Atlantic States the Eastern papers came to us freighted with paragraphs containing expressions of doubt, either as to the correctness of the time given or length of the track over which it took place. In answer to this sceptical current of opinion the very able turf editor of the Catiforna Spirit of the Times wrote a series of logical, clear and conclusive arguments in support of the reliability of the record obtained on that day by Mr. Morrow's horse; and, in fact, many strong points were made by the same pen in favor of a fair probability that St. Julien, under equally favorable circumstances, could go still faster. That the scoffers at the fame of this celebrated horse have some grounds for cavil is not to be disputed. The announcement that he would trot at Oakland on the 9th to beat his own time, showed the confidence of his owners to be contagious, and raised an excitoment that has not been equalled for many a long day; but despotic nature proved averse. As on Friday enough rain fell to make the track heavy, the owners of the horse having been propitious the anxious turf lovers, who had been on the qui vice, were gratified with the advertisement that the test was to be made yesterday over the Bay District Course—this track having been selected, as its convenience promised a larger attendance, and the distance of a fall wide around the track being a fact that adsuited no question. As the atmosphere up to Thursday showed no indication of dampness the firm of Morrow & Hickok furnished a damper through the press, to the effect that the bleak winds of the bay had proved too severe for their delicate charge, he baving contracted a cold, which unfitted him for the anticipated trial. Again were shoulders shrugged in scorn and fulled suspicions awakened. The lack of confidence in the indulgent weather god displayed by these gentlemen proved unfortunate; had they waited until last Friday evening they might have retired more gracefully from the long-delayed contest wires transmitted the news of this great feat to the Atlantic States the Eastern papers came to us

A pigeon match came off on Saturday last at New Brunswick, N. J., between Messrs, H. W. Abbott and John G. Voorhees, at 25 birds each, 21 yards rise, 80 yards boundary, for $50, one barrel, Abbott giving Vorhees 10 dead birds. Abbott won the match by killing 22.

At a meeting of the Pacific Blood Horse Association at the Baldwin Hotel, San Francisco, November 29, it was decided that as there were so few horses in training at the present time it was inexpedient to hold a winter meeting. With a view, however, of promoting the interests of the turf for the ensuing year, a committee composed of Messrs, Theodore Winters, W. M. Coombs, John A. Cardinell, J. C. Simpson, Louis Martin and C. M. Chase was nominated to take into consideration the opening of regular stakes for yearlings, two-year-olds and cup races, dating from the first of March, with the power of securing such a track as would best suit the interests of the association. The amount donated by members as added money for the sweepstakes will insure the success of the spring meeting.

AMUSEMENTS.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC-CONCERT.

Mr. Mapleson's opera troupe gave a very enjoyable concert last evening at the Academy of Music, the promainme including a number of excellent selections, nearly all of which were most admirably rendered. Mme. Ambre, Mme. Lablache; Signori Campanini, Del Puente, Runcio; Herr Behrens and the full orchestra and chorus took part, under the able direction of Signor Arditi.

able direction of Signor Arditi.

Why these are called "sacred concerts" is quite a mystery, as they include both religious music and selections of such undoubted worldly complexion as the "Mignon" overture and the Bullfighters' song from "Carmen" It is as inappropriate to tack on this ecclesiastical title to the excellent but miscellaneous programme as it would be were we to refer to it now as "Rev. Mr. Mapleson's sacred concert, in which he had the assistance of Deacon Campanini, Brother Del Puente and other members of his choir." Most people go to the Academy simply to enjoy the hearing of good music.

were we to refer to it now as "Rev. Mr. Mapleson's eacred concert, in which he had the assistance of Deacon Campanini, Brother Del Puente and other members of his choir." Most people go to the Academy simply to enjoy the hearing of good music, and as they are generally through with their religious exercises by evening the title of "sacred" is no extra inducement to draw them thither for recreation; those who go there under the delusive deta that the entire affair is a sort of "service of song" are quite mistaken. Music such as these concerts afford is a recreation that is rebustly healthy in tone, but entirely devoid of anything offensive to the compatible with a good observance of "the day of rest." These concerts need observance of "the day of rest." These concerts need observance of "the day of rest." These concerts need observance of "the day of rest." The programme of last night's concert was as Miss Botsford would have succeeded better had her selections not been such as inevitably recall greater sopranos who been such as inevitably recall greater sopranos who have sung them. Both vocalists were well received, but to the instruments were accorded the principal honors of the evening. The saxophone quartet was tumultuously encored, after each of their regular numbers, and the Bent Brothers were as effective as usual with their cornets, earning unusual praise for their rendering of the "Miserere," from "Trovatore." Mr. Pease successfully followed some of Gottschalk's most intricate and difficult scoring for the plane. Mr. Letsch did justice to his selections so far as his instrument would allow, and Master Kaltenborn emibited with his violin a degree of dexterity and certainty of bowing that would do credit to many an adult violinist. Mention is due to Mr. Caryl Flerio for the admirable accompaniments which added so greatly to the pleasure rendered by soloists, vocal and instrumental.

BOOTH'S SUNDAY NIGHT CONCERT. Mr. Maurice Grau's French Opera Company again united last evening in presenting another of the characteristic concerts which they have made popular both as regards prices and performances. The house was well filled, notwithstanding two similar attractions elsewhere, and the applause was generous enough to gratify the most exacting artist. The character of the entertainment may be inferred from the programme, which comprised selections from celebrated composers and which were rendered with an evenness of excellence that leaves little room for other than pleasant comment. The orchestra began the performance with selections from "Rigoletto." These were fol-lowed by the romanza "Une Lettre au Bon Dieu," lowed by the romanza "Une Lettre au Bon Dieu," by M. Bouvard, who was very hoarse; the duo, "Dos Chasserosses," between Milos. Gregoire and Raphael, and Offenbach's drinking song from "Les Bavards," sung by Mile. Angele, an unuauly warm encore attesting its success. This was succeeded by a grand air from "Masaniello," sung by M. Capoul; the letter song from "La Beile Poule," by Mile. Paola-Marie; "La Besace de Satan," by M. Jouard; "L'Eclu des Bois," by Mile. Lerouz-Bouvard; chansonette, "Mes Godillots," by M. Vilano; chansonette (by request), "Bras Dessus, Bras Dessus, Mile. Angele; grand air from "Enani" (in Italian), by Mile. Leroux-Bouvard; new song, "Les Ffoiles" (words by M. Ch. Villa), sung by M. No abatement in the interest taken by the German theatre-going public seems perceptible in the attendance of Mme. Magda Irschick's representations.

The week was ushered in by a representation of "Much Ado About Nothing." This was followed by "Jane Eyre," in which she scored a great triumph. "The Narrative of the Queen of Navarre" (Les Contes de la Reine de Navarre) was played on Friday and Saturday night and will be repeated to-morr evening. On Friday and Saturday next she will appear in her role of Marie-Anne, in Mallian von Men sohn's great drama, "Ein Welb aus dem Volke" (A Woman of the Public).

"Enchantment" originally cost the management of Niblo's Garden $37,500. It is yet to run an other week here, and will afterward be performed in Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Chicago and St. Louis. It is estimated that the profits this season will reach beyond $100,000. The "Black Crook" realized a half million of dollars for Jarrett & Palmer, and besides this Mr. Wheatley, one of the original firm of managers under whose régime it was brought out at Niblo's Garden; was enabled to retire independently rich. The "Black Crook" is now in the hands of the Kiralry Brothers, and recently filled the Globe Theatre, Boston.

MAX MARETZEK FOUND.

THE VETERAN IMPRESARIO CONFINED TO THE HOUSE OF A FRIEND IN THIS CITY-SUFFER-ING FROM NERVOUS PROSTRATION.

Mr. Max Maretzek arrived in this city from St. Louis at an early hour yesterday morning and is now staying at the house of a friend where he will be kept in seclusion for some time by the advice of his physician. Mr. Maretzek's menadvice of his physician. Mr. Maretzek's men-tal and physical condition is such that an interval of rest- is absolutely necessary for his restoration to health. Repeated financial embarrassments and artistic disappoint-ments have told heavily upon him, and his friends declare that but for his stern determination and strength of will in encountering obstacles his con-stitution would have broken down long since. "He must be kept," said he, "in such a condition that his mind will not be disturbed, and if people were allowed to converse with him on his business affairs it would excite and upset him."

"When did Mr. Maretzek arrive?"

"It must have been some time during the night, for I was called to see him this morning."

"Where is he now?"

"He is staying at the house of sefriend. That is all I desire to say on that point, as I wish him to be kept free from intrusion."

HIS MIND STILL SOUND.

"Have you observed any symptoms of mental derangement in his case?"
"No; he simply needs quiet, as I have said, for a short period. That is the only cure, and then he will be all right again. His body and brain have been overtaxed, and he is naturally of a nervous and excitable disposition."
"Has he spoken to you of his financial troubles?"
"Not a word; for I carefully abstained from alluding to them leat I should excite him."
"Then you knew that they must be the cause of his present deepondency?"
"I will not say despondency. He has been my patient for the past ton years, and I have had a great deal of trouble with him in this same way, so it is nothing new to me."
"Not exactly, but being a man of nervous temperament he passed many sleepless nights through auxiety regarding his different projects. He was sensitive and excitable in a high degree, and the slightest reverse or disappointment preyed heavily on his mind. As you are sware he had his share of failures and reverses. The natural result was a prostration of the nervous system. That was frequently the case with him, and it would be a mistake to suppose that his case now is more serious than at any previous time when his faculties were overtaxed."

The mysterious disappearance of Max Maretzek, manager of the Comic Opers Company, which has been performing to indifferent houses at the Grand Opera House in this city during the past week, is still unexplained, and not a trace of the missing im-pressrio has been discovered. Every effort has been made and is still being made to find him, but been made and is said to be company, left pountless in a strange city, have little hope that he will be found. He his many excellent qualities of head and heart. He would hand a poor person a five dollar bitl to help him as though it were nothing, and he was constantly assisting the needy. When the Academy of Music in New York burned down some fifteen years ago Mr. Maretzek lost about $50,000, which was invested in a magnificent stock of costumes, properties, &c., gathered through the incessant labor of many years. His last reverse has hurthim sorely, and he was engaged upon another opera, which he has given up in disgust, and will probably compose no more. Mr. Lane was certain Maretzek had simply gone off during a fit of melancholy, and as soon as time enough elapsed for him to recover his spirits he would report his whereshouts and explain his singular conduct. He said that Maretzek's indebtedness was to the principal singers, the chorus singers and the orchestra having been paid off to the last pay day.

liquidate their hotel bills took place at the Opera House to-night, but rain and sleet began falling about six o'clock, and in consequence there was not the large attendance that was expected. A private message was received by one of the singers this atternoon that Maretzek had been seen in Caicago, but this proved to be a mistake. Detectives who have been employed in searching for him since yesterday morning are certain he has gone East and is now in Cinchnati or has probably reached New York. His friends believe he has gone off for the purpose of rising money to pay his singers, and that he will turn up all right in a day or two. At this hour the mystery surrounding the disappearance is still unsolved, and detectives, friends and victimized singers are equally in the dark.
